

Important information about our beautiful Steinway piano.

As mentioned in the attached e-mail, here are the details (and a brief history) of the Reis family's Steinway grand piano.

We have a proud musical heritage dating back to famed composer Felix Mendelssohn. Our Steinway has been a cherished family member for more than 75 years and has been loved by all the musicians in our family.

After an extensive and painstaking year-long restoration/rebuilding process, our irreplaceable instrument has finally been restored to its original glory. Because the soft wood is easily damaged, we ask that she only be played by experienced musicians who will handle it with the appropriate care and respect.

Whether the custom cover is on the piano or not, under no circumstances should any objects be placed on the instrument – and the piano should never be used as a surface for food or drink.

Please keep all liquids at a distance as condensation can ruin the finish; spilled liquids will not only damage the wood but can cause irreversible internal damage. Finally, please do not play the piano with long fingernails as that will scratch the piano keys and fallboard, and please cover the keyboard when not in use.

Thank you for taking the time to read this and we hope you have a wonderful stay!

Musically yours,

John A. Reis
